High Extinction Ratio for Outdoor Lighting Applications. We demonstrate a compact IR-cutting laser based on Yb-doped fiber laser with high power and low linewidth. The laser shows an output power as high as 29 mW and an excellent extinction ratio of >30 dB in 900-1000 nm. We reveal that the performance of this laser is more reliable than conventional IR lasers, and exhibits its great potentials in indoor and outdoor lighting applications.Q: Payout in a Contract According to the conditions of One-week fixed deposit in post: - Q.1 There are two dates, one of which is before the other. On which date can the manager withdraw from the deposit on the banker's balance sheet? A. On neither date. If I haven't understood the Question correctly, please guide. A: Your understanding of the question is correct. The term "before the other" is not as precise as it seems at first. You need to compute the time the manager could withdraw the money, based on his or her knowledge of what has been generated so far - not on the time that the manager has to withdraw it. The manager knows that he/she could only withdraw it on whichever date he/she knows that the process of generating the interest has not yet ended. If the manager knows that the banker is investing the money in short term assets, and that those assets are generating interest, he/she could know that the banker has to generate interest on the money for one week at the end of the week, but he/she could not know that the banker has to generate interest before the end of the week
