'In my opinion, the explosive course of events in recent times has created a fertile breeding ground for all manner of nonsense.' – Bishop of Meath Dr Dermot Clifford, on some of the more unfounded rumours that have been circulating in the media, in the wake of the child sex abuse scandals in the Catholic Church. Dr Clifford was commenting on a more general awareness of sex abuse of children, which he says has become a very emotive issue with not much regard to the facts: 'The reality is that millions of children have been abused over many decades. In my opinion, the explosive course of events in recent times has created a fertile breeding ground for all manner of nonsense.' Predictable distortion of views, on the grounds of supposed lack of impartiality, on the same issue continues. The Irish Times asked the Bishop what he thought of the recent revelations by the Pope about clerical sexual abuse. 'The Pope expressed his sorrow for the pain caused to victims and their families, and his belief that full and clear e79caf774b
