Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an assembly for a heat-transfer fluid, in particular for a thermocouples. A particular application of the invention relates to a thermocouple assembly for a pyrometer. The heat-transfer fluid is, in particular, ethylene glycol or water. In the case of a thermocouple assembly for use with a pyrometer, the heat-transfer fluid usually flows through the assembly. a. Technical Considerations Pyrometers are sometimes used to monitor the temperature of the surfaces of steel contained in an oxygen-enriched blast furnace. To this end, they include a probe, called a Pyrometer, which is intended to be kept at close proximity to the surface of the steel to be measured. In general, a probe is placed in contact with the surface of the steel, and the temperature of the probe is measured. In the case of a high temperature, the probe is designed to be put in contact with the surface of the steel. In the case of a low
