Is there a standard way to convert a.ts file to javascript? I'm doing this: var myModule = angular.module('myApp', []); myModule.controller('MyController', ['$scope', function ($scope) { console.log($scope.foo); }]); I'm getting the following error: Uncaught Error: [$injector:modulerr] A: Assuming your .ts file is in the project/js/ directory, just open it in your favourite code editor and convert it to typescript using the appropriate TS plugin (for which you will need to install the typescript compiler). Once that's done, you will be able to use it without any changes in your html like this : You can also convert your typescript files to html code using typescript-to-html tool You can also convert them to an external js file using concat-to-js tool from this repository To be blunt, in a matter of fact way that should sink me right into the searing heat of a lower Indian summer, I am not that bothered by the government's introduction of exit polls
