The system treats fog as an integral part of the.Tentacle-like appearance of Wilms tumor on enhanced CT: appearance of a total of 11 children with histologically proven Wilms tumors. On enhanced computed tomography (CT) the gross appearance of a child with a histologically proven Wilms tumor (WT) appears similar to that of a giant writhing tentacle. We analyzed the CT scans of 11 children (eight males and three females) with WT for evidence of tentacle-like appearance of the tumor. The parents of the 11 children (14 study) were asked to rate them as "making up a giant writhing tentacle", "making up a pair of giant tentacles", "making up an extra-long trunk with arms", or "making up other shapes". Two radiologists reviewed the CT examinations independently and then agreed on the presence of tentacle-like appearance of the tumor on post-contrast CT. The findings were recorded in a standardized manner. CT and 3D-CT examinations of 3 of the 11 children were also reviewed by
